TIMEQUAKE DOPAMINE REMIXES

RZR003

Finally, the time for Timequake has come! After almost two years after the original mix of the track Dopamine has been produced by a slovenian dubtechno duo Timequake, the release was published yesterday on September 11th 2011 by Retrospective Zoology. Beside the the original mix the release features a dubtechno version and seven remixes by artists, such as Organon, Optic_, Fingers in the noise, Substituent, vs/Kurayami, and Sonitus eco, respectively.

ABOUT TIMEQUAKE

Timequake is a crew of two slovenian electronic music producers Andraz Drascic (a.k.a. Miko) and Peter Jenko a.k.a. (Vennett). Their collaboration started 2006. Miko's first interest in electronic music reflected in being a DJ. Soon he realised that spinning the vinyls of other producers isn't the real thing. Later on he bought his first PC and started with producing his own music. His self-critic attitude to producing music helped him to gain quality technical knowledge. Sound is the form and the face of the music. Miko nowadays work' also as a mastering engineer working with many artists and bands. Vennett began showing his interest in electronic music when he got his first PC. Later on he wanted to become a DJ but he found out that being a DJ is not as much creative as producing his own music. His attitude to producing music is writing quality compositions. Scores are the soul and the materia of the music. Timequake stands for producing high quality music material. With couple of releases on Octex's Chilli Space Compilation and with Dopamine, which is just a glimpse into forthcoming LP as a RZ limited edition series, they try to produce new musical perspective's not influenced by other electronic mainstream genres.
